Who we are and what we do

English and digital linguistics at Chemnitz University of Technology cover structure, use, acquisition, learning, processing and investigation. We teach and place a particular focus on the digital research methods corpus linguistics.

Our research is based on the cooperation between researchers from many disciplines. It combines basic and theoretical research with potential practical applications like the optimisation of the pronunciation of foreign-language streetnames or the processing of commas with eye-tracking.

We integrate our research into our teaching and encourage our students to conduct their own experimental studies.

Our goal is to enable our students to reflect upon language from a variety of perspectives through intensive tutoring and with a very broad and solid education that prepares them for the future. We encourage and support international exchanges, e.g. during a semester abroad.
